

Worksheet 6B Ensuring Follow-up

The following will follow up with users of the evaluation findings		In this manner	This support is available for follow-up
1	The primary point of contact, which represents the results of the evaluation through relevant stakeholders like community leaders, health professionals, and policymakers	Two-way communication with the stakeholders came in the form of laying bare findings and implications to the various entities that offered their views.	Funding for implementation of projects in response to the identified gaps and immediate needs
2	Interaction and communication about the results and facilitate discussion among members so they can ask questions and offer feedback	That involves the creation of a cohesive community and dialogue for the expression of ideas and the posing of questions, as well as the promotion of a multilateral and transparent communication environment.	Technical assistance and mentorship from experts in the distinct fields needed.
3	Leisure and recreational facilities can offer guidance and practical tools to stakeholders for the goal of designing and executing action plans founded on evaluation results.	Effectively executing this initiative requires focusing on critical stakeholders by mobilizing them to use evaluation results to formulate ongoing actions and projects	Engagement models are used to work jointly with stakeholders who have different areas of competencies and interests.
4	Create a feedback schedule with frequent touch points or meetings with the stakeholders to track the progress and resolve any hurdles.	By periodically sending information about accomplishments, potential problems, and suggestions for further action, as well as asking.	Periodical reviews and discussions to make honest input and track the process of success
5	Sharing updates and progress with stakeholders and the public in general to show off the value and importance of the assessment findings cannot be underestimated.	Through regular updates and reporting of outcomes and progress to existing partners and the larger community, the adequate returns on	Information provision medium for members of the stakeholder and community.

		investment can be seen to act as the primary assessment.
6	Have a constant review of collected feedback and accordingly amend the evaluation methodology to make the process better with optimum results.	Concentrating on heeding feedback from the evaluations and drawing lessons from that into future assessment to ensure that the progress is as significant as it can be.	Plans of evaluation should incorporate feedback mechanisms to get inputs, ideas, and proposals for future assessments