

Special Issue of the Journal of Investigative Psychology and Offender Profiling on Investigative Psychology in Court

Many aspects of Investigative Psychology are finding their way directly into legal proceedings. This includes issues such as 'offender profiles' or 'linkage analysis' used by the defence or the prosecution, challenges to the veracity of testimony, including eyewitness testimony, or commentary on the interview procedures that witnesses experienced or indeed the questioning in court. Explorations of what it is likely that witnesses may be able to remember or may have falsely been encouraged to think they remember are also relevant. In recognition of these important developments in the field, original articles, including quantitative or qualitative studies, case studies, or careful critical reviews, dealing with any aspects of Investigative Psychology that have been or could be relevant to legal proceedings in civil or criminal cases, employment tribunals or other quasi-legal contexts are welcome.

Manuscripts should follow the usual instructions for electronic submission of papers to JIP-OP. Authors should indicate that they wish the manuscript to be reviewed for inclusion in the special issue. The Associate Editor for this issue would be happy to review plans for papers in advance of their receipt. All papers will be peer reviewed.

Associate Editor responsible for this special issue:

Donna Youngs, PhD
Centre for Investigative Psychology
Eleanor Rathbone Building
The University of Liverpool
Liverpool L69 7ZA
UK.
Email: d.e.youngs@liverpool.ac.uk

Copyright of Journal of Investigative Psychology & Offender Profiling is the property of John Wiley & Sons Inc. and its content may not be copied or emailed to multiple sites or posted to a listserv without the copyright holder's express written permission. However, users may print, download, or email articles for individual use.