A CENTURY OF ACHIEVEMENT

HOW IT ALL STARTED

In the early 20th century, a small group of visionary philanthropists recognized that turbulent times required a major change in how Jewish New Yorkers could support the causes they cared most about.

Felix Warburg, a Jewish investment banker and humanitarian, spearheaded a group of community leaders to launch a federation, a central organization that would reduce the duplication and competition among many local Jewish charities, and maximize what they could do together.

On January 10, 1917, the Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies of New York City was formally chartered by the State of New York. In its first year, it distributed $2.2 million to Jewish hospitals, orphanages, and social service organizations.

The agreement creating the United Jewish Appeal (UJA) was signed in January 1939 to provide relief for European Jews trapped in the vise of war, to sustain Jews living in pre-state Palestine, and to facilitate German Jewish immigration to safer countries.

Dear Sir:-

You of course know that a Federation is being formed which will undertake the collection of funds for the support of all the Jewish philanthropic societies in Manhattan and the Bronx. It is expected that contributions to our limited fundations will be the basis of the Federation.

THE EARLY 1900S

1.5 million Jewish immigrants arrive in New York Harbor, leading to the creation of a Federation to meet increasing needs.

OUR APPROACH

We make strategic decisions about where we can make the biggest difference, and build innovative programs to change millions of lives.

We're the world's largest local philanthropy.

That means we fund hundreds of nonprofits, local and global, to tackle today's most pressing problems head-on. It means we're able to move quickly in times of crises, because we have the relationships and resources already in place to get things done. And it means that we can leverage our collective voice to advocate more loudly for government dollars for people in need across our city.

We welcome multiple perspectives across our community, knowing that we're stronger for our diversity. It's when we all work together that we can get more done effectively and efficiently. It's how we care for Jews everywhere and New Yorkers of all backgrounds. How we respond to crises near and far. And how we shape the Jewish future.

We're New York's Jewish philanthropic go-to. We have reach. We're innovative and impactful. For more than 100 years and counting. Join us and be part of it all.

How We Work

As stewards of our donors' dollars, we think of our grants as critical community investments to influence broad systemic change. We start by meeting with experts, lay leaders, and academics and asking, "What are today's most urgent challenges?" We research the issues ladder up to UJA's overall vision, while staying informed of critical trends. And we draw on our expertise and leverage our relationships with a wide range of nonprofits to spearhead initiatives that boldly address key issues.

By driving together key influencers and listening to the many voices that make up our community — from agencies and grantees to synagogues and other partners in change — we can deliver funds to areas where we'll have the greatest impact.

When emergency or disaster strike — we move quickly and effectively to get resources on the ground and bring urgent relief.

How We Allocate Funds

UJA has three main strategic planning areas. Caring and Jewish Life each invest targeted grants for specific projects, looking at how to mobilize the community locally and globally to enhance our work in areas like poverty, employment, the elderly, health and well-being, strengthened Jewish engagement and connection, and leadership development. The Jewish Communal Network provides core operating support and oversight to nearly 75 core partners, and offers guidance and funding to many other nonprofits, large and small.

We've also recently launched the UJA LAB, a laboratory offering innovative solutions to challenges that require our rapid response. This is where years of experience and an entrepreneurial spirit go hand in hand. We're upping the impact, getting things done quickly, and moving on to the next challenge.

UJA provided $154.5 million in grants and other support to nonprofits and initiatives in New York, in Israel, and around the world. (Fiscal Year 2018)

Individual grants may be attributed to more than one cause. Causes address our impact across multiple geographic areas.

Research

In order to better understand and respond to the ever changing needs of our community, we commission research to study the demographics in our region and the many layers of Jewish life that exist in New York, in Israel, and around the world. These reports are prepared by experts from universities, research institutes, and professional firms, as well as independent consultants and UJA staff. This knowledge informs how we move forward in allocating funds to address our community's most pressing needs.
