Culture determines the kind of food consumed in particular community. food and dietary have a significant impact on population ob development, production and marketing of food. cross- cultural, Eco- consciousness, non-ethnic cultural groups among others. food also differ from one religion to another such as Christianity, Islamic Buddhism, and Hinduism among others.

Underlying Principles

Culture influences on what a community feed on as they have values which they subscribe from. On the other hand, food consumption varies from one ethnic to another and this bring variation across ethnic boundaries. Finally, each religion has their own principles and this can determine what they eat and how they get treated.

Nursing Interventions

WHO? WHEN? WHY? HOW?

Nurses intervene on cultural influence on nutrition by encouraging people to have a balanced diet. this is by encouraging to consume foods which culture does not allow. additionally, such nutrients can be supplied through injection in the vein. This action can be taken when the patient have been found to lack essential nutrients in the body.
