

Each student will choose a mental disorder to research. Students will record a 15-20-minute audio/video providing biological, psychological, social, and religious or spiritual issues related to the disorder. This media project should incorporate academic/scholarly literature as the student is verbalizing the required elements. The final part of the paper should be a model for treatment. Students should identify various models for treatment of their disorder documented in scholarly literature. Students should identify the model thought to be the most effective model of treatment and discuss how their model is consistent with Christian worldview. Students must reference a minimum of 5 sources throughout the audio/video. A rubric is below. The following outline summarizes what MUST be included in the audio/video:

- Identification of the chosen disorder at the beginning of the video.
- Biological, psychological, social and religious/spiritual issues related to the disorder.
- Identification of the various models recommended for treatment of the disorder.
- Clear statement of which model the students thinks is best and how that model is consistent with a Christian Worldview (points of agreement and points of departure).

Note: The five scholarly references must be clearly identified throughout the audio/video.

Record a 15- to 20-minute audio/video in response to the prompt above, then post your recording to YouTube. Make sure to check the sound and/or lighting of your recording -- it is recommended that you record a two-minute test recording to double check your sound/light.

Make sure the YouTube setting is on UNLISTED. If the setting is on private, the instructor will not be allowed access to the audio/video, and you will receive a grade of zero. For additional YouTube help, visit <https://wiki.letu.edu/display/itkb/Youtube+Help+Links>Links to an external site..
