Is education really a valuable investment without depreciation? Most people wish to live a comfy and happy life. A good living correlates to GDP per capita. Even though GDP seems no connection with our daily life, but it actually demonstrates people's life standard and happiness through income, expenditure, and welfare. Some the people will have a question of what we should do to increase our GDP per capita. A nice insight of stocks and funds, well control of our finance and good fortune may give us good feedback for our lifetime income. However, no one can ensure a business without depreciation. The only way to make a striking and sustained benefit is keeping studying, learning, thinking, creating and inventing. The ability to do all these valuable things are connected to our education, experience of life and work, and a creative heart. So yes, we will focus more on education's benefit in our modern society and monoculture, and it is an investment without deprecation.

People should be educated more to boost the growth of output per capita, and give more knowledge to citizens in variety of countries, which are valuable ways to solve the monoculture's problems, and also find our confidence and equality back.

Outline:

1. In unit1 essays, authors talk about the importance of education and how this society works with education. Especially with humanity majors, authors all have different views of humanity majors. In the beginning, our life starts with imitating other movement and emotional things. After the original things, people start to walk and speaking. Speaking is actually the first one thing to learn to demonstrate our life is beginning. This is actually an ability that humanity majors can improve us. And this is meaningful for most people, people should all be able to learn reading as the best way to improve yourself. I believe this is the main idea of humanity majors.

2. In unit1, most authors only talk about how humanity works with your life. But actually we can gain different things and knowledge through different ways, such as reading without taking a humanity major class, such as in monoculture, most people have already thought we should have a sight of training ourselves and developing ourselves in monoculture. In Unit2 essay, education works efficiently with our monoculture. Due to lack of job interview and sustain, we should cultivate ourselves on the campus.

3. Creating is a huge purpose in our lifetime. Everyone is unique in their thoughts. How can we have a creating sight? According to unit2, women feel not that confidence as men do, but actually, women have a good view of creating as a mother. We meant to give birth, and we meant to create new creatures. They only think women should be more and more confidence. Creation is a good development in monoculture. Due to the lack of new and valuable ideas, we should create the next singularity. We need more elites to improve our world, just like Tesla did. So we need work and education ourselves.

SO education has a meaningful status in our monoculture, and its a sustained benefit and investment.
