

6% of your paper matches public sources

We found this text in our plagiarism check

Nelken, D (2017) Rethinking comparative criminal justice. In: Liebling A, Maruna S and McAra L (eds) Oxford Handbook of Criminology, 6th edn. Oxford: Oxford University Press

See sources Dismiss

We found this text in our plagiarism check

Bevir M (2010) Democratic Governance. Princeton, NJ, and Oxford: Princeton University Press

See sources Dismiss

We found this text in our plagiarism check

Brogden M and Nijhar P (2005) Community Policing: National and International Models and Approaches. Cullompton: Willan Publishing

Save

My papers

Help

We found this text in our plagiarism check

Fyfe NR, Terpstra J, and Tops P (2013) Community Policing: A Comparative Analysis. Cullompton: Willan Publishing

1. Nelken, D (2017) Rethinking comparative criminal justice. In: Liebling A, Maruna S and McAra L (eds) Oxford Handbook of Criminology, 6th edn. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 416–437.

Annotation

The article forms the backbone of the study. The author acknowledges Nelken as having done systematic comparative research, which pivots the discussion provided by the author. The article was instrumental in defining reforms in Europe. The report asserts that community policing is a result of community demands, an idea the author does not dispute.

2. Bevir M (2010) Democratic Governance. Princeton, NJ, and Oxford: Princeton University Press.

Annotation

The article introduces a different perspective on governance. The article leads to the revelation that governance is not strictly bound to specific frameworks of institutional functions. The realization helps the author to build on the theory with further research. According to the writer, the views converge.

3. Brogden M and Nijhar P (2005) Community Policing: National and International Models and Approaches. Cullompton: Willan Publishing.

Annotation

MacBook Air