

STUDENT NAME _____

DISORDER/DISEASE PROCESS HIV/AIDS

REVIEW MODULE CHAPTER _____

Alterations in Health (Diagnosis)

It is a condition that causes death to the defence systems causing an individual to suffer common illnesses due to lack of immunity.

Pathophysiology Related to Client Problem

Human immunodeficiency virus

Health Promotion and Disease Prevention

ARV drugs are helpful to promote health of the client. Prevention techniques include use of protection and avoiding body fluid contact.

ASSESSMENTRisk Factors

Death
Infecting family and relatives
Stigma

Expected Findings

Negative if you don't have and positive if you have it.

Laboratory Tests

Antibody/antigen test

Diagnostic Procedures

A drop of blood is taken and passed through a fluid that shows two or one line depending on status of the individual.

SAFETY CONSIDERATIONS

Look into the devices that are used to ensure that they are clean and not used before. Blood is a quick way to infect someone with HIV/AIDS.

PATIENT-CENTERED CARENursing Care

The nurse has the responsibility of showing the client what they will eat and how they will take their medication to ensure they are

Medications

There is use of anti retro viral ARV's that help reduce the effectiveness of the HIV virus in the body.

Client Education

The client should understand that there are ways to reduce HIV prevalence and that they can still live a normal life.

Therapeutic Procedures

The nurse should follow the steps closely to ensure client is calm and understanding

Interprofessional Care

The nurse ensures that the patient feels comfortable and that they provide options to the individuals to give them hope of tomorrow.

Complications

Lack of knowledge on the topic.
Lack of caring about self and actions performed.
Lack of knowing preventive measures to safeguard one's life.
Stigmatization