Reflections on How Ludwig Can Help Revise Academic Essays

Writing in English can be difficult, especially where one does not understand where to use words and phrases and in what context to use the words. Thanks to Ludwig, that problem is simplified. More importantly, one can write but revise your work to understand the words written or their context. Ludwig is a valuable tool in writing English since it allows the search for words and sentences and highlights how well to incorporate them, but it can help revise academic essays.

Academic essays require that you place sentences in the best context. Each paragraph must have a topic sentence. During revision, you can run your sentences through Ludwig to determine if you have put them in the correct context. Also, there might be words that need defining for the reader to understand. One can use Ludwig to get those definitions, synonyms and find the missing words (Ludwig, 2021). Also, plagiarism is a big issue. You can write your paper, and before submission, plagiarism checking programs highlight sections of your document that are plagiarized. In such situations, you must paraphrase the sentences to change the words while preserving the meaning, and Ludwig is a good paraphrasing tool that you can use to revise such sections of your paper.

When revising an essay, you can experience instances where you are unsure which words to use to make an argument. Ludwig helps align the thoughts and the words, hence helping you deliver your argument. It helps one check whether the sentences and the terms used relate to the argument by providing meaningful words to substitute in the essay and generate meaning. When revising the paper, you are not confident in the relevant terms. However, Ludwig allows us to search for sentences and see how they have been used elsewhere, helping the writer understand how well they can fit into essays.
