

The concept of identity refers to how individuals express and perceive themselves. Identity takes into consideration how a person was born and groomed – such as sex, ethnicity, heritage, education, or economic status- all of the this are significant on how an individual defines their identity. However, a person's character is bound to change as the individual progresses in life. Experiences have a considerable effect on how a person views. Conversely, identities influence the decisions an individual makes: the fashion they adopt, religious beliefs, the type of friends they choose are all decisions. Artists have always taken advantage of art to question, explore, and express their understanding of identity.

THE IDENTITY

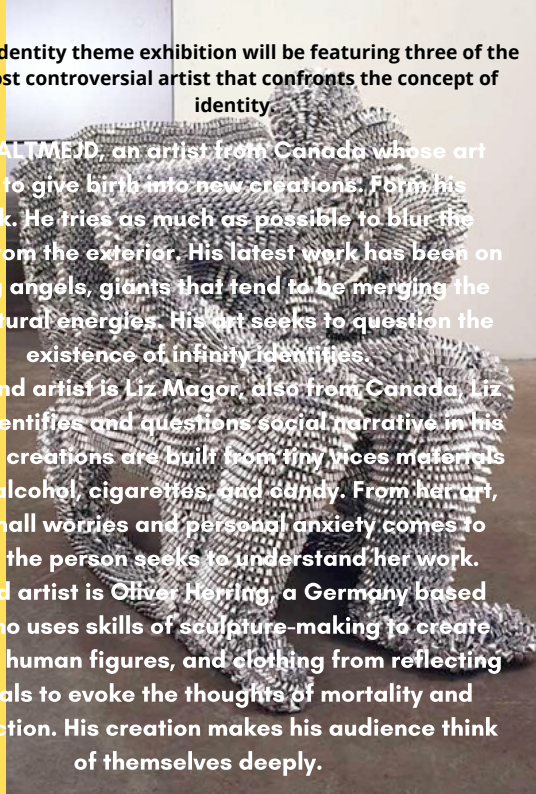

EXHIBITION

The identity theme exhibition will be featuring three of the most controversial artist that confronts the concept of identity

DAVID ALTMER, an artist from Canada whose art seeks to give birth into new creations. Form his artwork. He tries as much as possible to blur the interior from the exterior. His latest work has been on creating angels, giants that tend to be merging the supernatural energies. His art seeks to question the existence of infinity identities.

The second artist is Liz Magor, also from Canada, Liz Magor identifies and questions social narrative in his work. Her creations are built from tiny vices materials such as alcohol, cigarettes, and candy. From her art, one's small worries and personal anxiety comes to play as the person seeks to understand her work.

The third artist is Oliver Herring, a Germany based artist who uses skills of sculpture-making to create furniture, human figures, and clothing from reflecting materials to evoke the thoughts of mortality and introspection. His creation makes his audience think of themselves deeply.

One of the works that will be featured is Liz Magor "THE One Bedroom Apartment "this creation is just a collection of boxes. That seeks to address the identity of an individual who is moving from one state to the other or a lady who recently moved in with the boyfriend, she will not move out with all her belongings to his place. Meaning she will have to throw away things that she one's sacrificed and saved for. The piece will give one the thought that all your belongings are just pacifiers implying that whenever you grow or disrupted, it is never pleasant. And at one time, you will have to get done with things that we're one pleasurable buying.
