

Keishawn Brewton

Reflection 5

For the annotated bibliography, I have started looking at some sources but have not developed direct sources I'd like to use. The most difficult part of collecting my sources for my Annotated Bibliography is my time management. I have ideas of where to begin but have not had a chance to sit down and focus with collecting specific sources. I do find that once I get focused, I am able to collect my sources and bring together my ideas compared to other authors. I will be looking for scholarly texts related to gender disciplines in the fields of sexism in relation to new LGBTQ+ studies and as well as gender roles. New research is coming out daily so I think I will need to create a more narrow topic to be able to have one subject having all of my focus. I think the most well part of my studies so far is having a place to start. Now that spring break is next week, I will hopefully have time to research my 10 needed articles to complete the annotated bib. Also, it helps me a lot that the past reflections I have compared with scholarly sources, so, I already have an idea of the material I am looking for.