

King_Arthur.edited.docx

by

Submission date: 24-Sep-2021 05:50AM (UTC-0600)

Submission ID: 1656395060

File name: King_Arthur.edited.docx (13.16K)

Word count: 497

Character count: 2582

The Legend of King Arthur

Name

Institution

Course

Instructor

Date

The Legend of King Arthur

Legend stories are passed down through folk tales and written sources in many civilizations. For instance, in the United Kingdom, stories about King Arthur, his undertakings, and principles have been told over the years. The proof offered for the existence of the accounts, on the other hand, is at times limited and arguable. However, it is vital to acknowledge the actuality of tales such as King Arthur, although the material can be questionable. It is critical to believe in tales because they communicate genuine teachings that may influence individuals of all ages. As mentioned by Georges. (2020) legend stories provide teachings that are realistic, ageless, and universal. I also think that the belief in myths and tales is usually beneficial because they may frequently teach us more about how individuals existed and have a moral to them. Likewise, The Arthurian Legend is still immensely popular today because it contains aspects people can identify with, including adoration, loyalty, temptations, and courage. The tales of King Arthur tell a similar tale of good triumphing over tyranny. He was a king who was not like everyone else in that he was not corrupt; thus, I think people can emulate his good deeds.

Similarly, I feel individuals must accept and believe in legends such as King Arthur. One of the most imperative explanations for such individuals is because they are a wonderful basis of motivation. Many people do not believe in legends since they feel that their narratives were made up due to insufficient proof to substantiate such achievements. Consequently, they are not inspired by such tales. Mythologies like King Arthur, in my view, are an inspiration because of the vast things he was capable of achieving in a short amount of time. Besides, since the incident occurred several years back, people must not anticipate abundant proof relating to such stories.

It is also important to believe in legends because our current thirst for imagination reflects our need to reimagine the past and instill optimism in the present. Just like the moral character, devotion to friends and family, adherence to the law, and defense of the vulnerable have been the cornerstones of King Arthur fellowship's character over the years. They provide confidence that doing the ethically correct thing is worthwhile, even if it results in momentary defeat (Georges, 2020). In the end, ethics and values triumph, and these lasting characteristics of the stories have kept them alive in hearts and minds of many people throughout the ages. To conclude, I concur that people should believe in legends even though there is little evidence. Such tales present the society with a first account for why various events occurred and established a particular standard of what is deemed right or wrong.

References

Georges, R. A. (2020). The General Concept of Legend: Some Assumptions to Be Reexamined and Reassessed. In American Folk Legend (Pp. 1-20). University Of California Press.

ORIGINALITY REPORT

0%

SIMILARITY INDEX

0%

INTERNET SOURCES

0%

PUBLICATIONS

0%

STUDENT PAPERS

PRIMARY SOURCES

Exclude quotes Off

Exclude bibliography On

Exclude matches Off