

M3-2 – Who Is Your Leader?

Although leading is one of the four functions of management, not every manager is necessarily a leader. As you no doubt remember from MGT 150, there is a difference between leadership and management.

Certain traits are attributed to managers while other traits are associated with leaders. Leaders do not have to be famous people as many of us can no doubt identify leaders in the individuals with whom we interact in our daily lives.

Your Assignment:

1. In today's world, whom do you consider a leader? Your answer could be a famous person, an acquaintance, a family member, friend, etc.
 - Who inspires you?
 - Who is your role model?
2. What qualities does this individual demonstrate that make him/her a leader?
3. At your internship site, who are the leaders? Keep in mind that not all leaders have titles or even occupy leadership positions.

Please use a paragraph consisting of several sentences to answer each of the three questions.

As always, spell check and proofread your work before submission.
