Prompt:

Feminism is an under-discussed theory of international relations. First, define the feminist international relations theory. Now, examine the feminist theory of international relations through the lens of Game of Thrones. Some specific issues to discuss are: the lack of representation of women in GoT, objectification of women (even women in leadership roles), and the international relations policies that might change if representation were equal. Be specific. Use SPECIFIC examples from the GoT episodes you were required to watch (optional: bring in examples from other episodes). Feminist theory actually does a relatively good job explaining what we observe in GoT. Explain how/why.
