

Paper 3 Instructions: Write a four-paragraph argumentative essay based on one story from Dr. Huyler's collections?

Are any of the following ethical principles upheld or violated: autonomy, beneficence, non-maleficence, justice, patient confidentiality, fidelity, veracity, or negligence? Select one or more and explain how this is demonstrated. Use in-text citations from the story in each body paragraph to support your positions (remember we do not put citations in the introduction or conclusion).

Autonomy: freedom from external control or influence; independence

Beneficence: generous will of doing good.

Non-Maleficence: asserts an obligation not to inflict harm intentionally.

Justice: element of fairness in medical decisions

Patient Confidentiality: personal and medical information given to a health care provider not to be disclosed.

Fidelity: the ability to do good

Negligence: failure to take proper care of something/someone

Veracity: It refers to comprehensive, accurate, and objective transmission of information, as well as to the way the professional fosters the patients or subjects' understanding.

In-text citation:

Huyler (2002) says, " _____ " (p.).

He states " _____ " (Huyler, 2002, p.).

_____ (Huyler, 2002).

Outline 1

P1 Intro: Thesis statement > In the short story "Power" by Frank Huyler the ethical principle of autonomy is violated. 2 supporting points about violation of autonomy

P2 Supporting Point 1 Examples and 1 in-text citation

P3 Supporting Point 2 Examples and 1 in-text citation

P4 Conclusion: Summarize your thoughts. Think about the impact/connection this story provokes in the field of healthcare today.

Outline 2

P1 Intro: Thesis Statement > In the short story "Sugar" by Frank Huyler the ethical principles of beneficence and autonomy are violated. 2 supporting points

P2 Supporting Point 1 Examples and in-text citation

P3 Supporting Point 2 Examples and in-text citation

P4 Conclusion: Summarize your thoughts. Think about the impact/connection this story provokes in the field of healthcare today.

References

Huyler, F. (2002). The Blood of Strangers: Title. University of California Press. Los Angeles, C.A.