

Compare and Contrast Heads of State

As we have learned throughout this course, each nation is different - and in many cases, VERY different. Even those nations that are similar, such as Canada and Great Britain, have powers allocated differently, and this is no different with the powers, abilities, rights and responsibilities of the heads of state.

Our task with this assignment will be to investigate and evaluate the powers and abilities of THREE different heads of state from around the world. You are free to select any three heads of state, although it is recommended that one of which be Canada - simply because this is the government with which we are most familiar and it is always good to know what is happening at your home.

You should look at some of the following for each head of state:

- Title
- Requirements for being Head of State (Prime Minister, President, King, Queen, etc.)
- Length of term
- How many times they can be elected and re-elected
- The powers of the Head of State

- The responsibilities of the Head of State
- Any other information that you feel is important to know

You can complete this evaluation (which, essentially, is a compare and contrast) any way that you like: you can present it in a visual format (such as Prezi or PowerPoint); you can write it in a formal essay style; you can construct and complete a graphic organizer - however you would like to present your research information is just fine!

Be sure to include both proper footnotes (if you do a written report) and a bibliography page in proper Chicago formatting.
