Personal Statement

Being a nurse to me entails a lot more than what most people think. To me, it means compassion, empathy, patience and a high level of sensitivity. One being a nurse has to devote all their time to a total stranger all hours of the day and night. Even in the worse stressful situations, being a nurse is the ability to help the loved ones of the patient calm down. Consequently, nurses are professionals, communicators and leaders. In addition, being nurse calls for high level of confidence and advocacy. Having the responsibility to humanity, a nurse puts the patient first and is thus considered as the healing hands that people look for in desperate times. To me, since people are fearful when they are in hospitals alone, I will be a source of peace of mind since when the patients see you they automatically come down having the assurance that all will be well.

As a nurse in a hospital such as USC, I will bring to the profession quite a number of aspects. One of the aspects that I will bring to the profession is the idea that nurses can lead. I will always be at the forefront to lead other nurses in every situation that I can. Secondly, encouraging and demonstrating high level of flexibility will be my core principle. This will help me to work on different days and even fill in for other nurses who cannot work at certain hours. Thirdly, maintaining a positive attitude during difficult times at work as a way to uplift other workers in the hospitals during the times they are down will be my driving force. Last but not least, as a nurse in a hospital such as USC I will display high level of compassion to the patients at the same time act as a role model to my colleagues to emulate the same in order to appraise the aspect of offering high-quality services to the patients who visit USC every now and then.
