

Response to classmate: Rachelle Anne

1. I believe the government should have laws and control over things to keep a Country running as smoothy as possible, but when it comes to Antigone she did something that went against the government and what her brothers wanted to happen. She still continues to do what she thinks is right. Even when the government orders her to do otherwise. When it comes to family and how they want to lay their loved ones to rest I don't think they should have such control over that. Even if the family doesn't agree with one another they shouldn't interfere. Death hits people in all different ways and by the government getting involved will no help the situation.