

Student's Name

Professor's Name

Course Number

Date

American Values

The survey on American values was conducted in September 15, 2018 in which seven people were interviewed using questionnaires.

The survey

Q1

(a). Has there been a change in American values over the last two decades?

YES	NO
71.4%	8.6%

b. If so, how can we account for this shift?

The 71.4% of the people surveyed believe that there has been a change in the values of the Americans because the values are in the upheaval and triggered by technological advancement, prolonged pessimism, as well as the loss of confidence in the majority of economic, political religious and social institutions.

(c). If not, what factors contributed to the preservation of the American value system?

8.6% of the people surveyed believe that there has been no changes in the values of American in the last twenty years because America is a socially maturing country and has the capacity to reject drugs and other easy fixes.

Q2.

- (a) .Has the values of Americans been getting worse, staying the same, or getting better over the past decade?

Getting better	Getting worse	Staying the same	Do not know
9%	70%	21%	1%

- (b) If the American values has been getting worse, how can we account for this shift?

70% of the surveyed Americans believe that the values of American has been getting worse for the past decade due to decreasing family values, increased materialism, political corruption and celebrity-obsessed culture.

Q3 Do you think the values of the people of America will grow weaker, stronger or stay the same for the next decade?

Stronger	Staying the same	Weaker	Do not know
20%	26%	52%	2%

More than half of the people surveyed believe that the American values will become weaker in the next decade because of the drastically decrease of the family life traditions, hence leading to the damage of the society. Majority of the Americans more especially the youth prefer having different lifestyles such as supporting divorce and getting children out of the wedlock. Also many Americans are unmarried women and men living together, have no problem of consuming hard drugs such as marijuana as well as engage in homosexuality.