Response 1

I ascent with the post that the American healthcare system is complicated as it is influenced by different factors that affect the future. The leading actors are health insurances, regulations, facilities, and care provisions. For example, the sector is changing to implement patient-centered care, in that each client is handled individually and holistically. As the post insists, the changes have short- and long-term effects where some are positive while others are negative. On the positive side, the quality of care shall improve as the patient-centered approach's primary goal is to meet the patients' needs (Adams & Markowitz, 2018). On the other hand, the increasing demand for insurance will leave some people out, as the costs shall increase. The burden on the public will also increase in the future. Drivers such as the Affordable Care Act will play a massive role in ensuring that the expected changes occur. I concur with the writer that affordable public healthcare insurance needs to be introduced to boost healthcare in the country.
