

Hessah AlBoloushi

#817450602

Immigrants have play a big role in global issue nowadays. The increase in population in some countries because of immigrants, whether they are legal or not. In addition, there are many reasons that lead to immigration such as seeking for a better life. Samuel Huntington in his article, "Why 'Americanization' of Newcomers Is Still Important" explains the general context which is the modern-day America and the audience is the ordinary America and the policy makers. Furthermore, Huntington argues that modern-day immigrants unlike their predecessors come in with their diversity in to the America and don't assimilate to the American culture leading to weakening of America's culture identity. Also, he uses many evidences to support his claim. — what

One of the evidences that Hunt. explains to support his argument is that American political leaders are to blame for the situation which is the political leaders have constantly engaged in encouraging this diversity and multiculturalism unlike their predecessors. In addition, Clinton for instance called for a "great revolution" to liberate Americans from their dominant European culture<sup>(H12004)</sup>. It was an effective evidence that shows how politicians have been encouraged immigrants with multi identity.

how do
you
know
this?

evidence
is
it
effect

Another evidence that Hunt. illustrates to support his argument is how multiculturalism would have adverse effects on politics and identity as Americans. "A glimpse of what a splintering of America into English and Spanish speaking camps might look like can be found in current day Miami". (H12004)
This case is already manifesting in Miami. Also, Hunt. explains how Latin Americans and Mexican influenced American by their culture and language and how this could have problematic effects in future especially on matters of national identity and loyalty. Hunt. has an effective evidence describes the influence of immigrants in America.

Secondary sources will be used as supporting evidence. It will include scholarly journals, media releases and relevant but credible sources in the same topic as Hunt. Also, to ensure credibility the sources will be obtained from Google scholar and library. Besides, there are several authors have observed on the topic immigration to the US (outside source) and the effects it has had on the American's culture. That will include authors of differing opinions and those with similar ones.

Huntington has well organization describing his article. Generally, Hunt. starts by giving a brief outlook of the claim and gives evidences so as to convince the readers. On overall, I find the article to be logically organized and effective.

?
focus
on his article
only

?

add
more
here

In my conclusion, immigrant has play a big role in influence Americans by their culture and language. Also, Hunt. supports his claims by giving various of evidences. First, he talks about how politicians encourage immigrants with cultural identity. Also, how Latin Americans and Mexicans have a huge impact on America's culture. In addition, the wave of immigrants can be one of the reasons that affect America's culture. Finally, Hunt. has an effective arguments to support his claim.