Essay B- About myself

Every human being has got identity, interest and talent that are distinct from one another. For one to have an interest in something there must be a motivating factor. Besides, there is one point in life where people are influenced to achieve the desires of their lives irrespective of the talent they have. For instance, attaining college degree, getting a well-paying job and eventually start a family. Others may be influenced in vying for certain political positions, putting up charitable organizations in memory of someone special or the love for something. To this end, I do embrace diversity. In this case, understanding other people's perspectives and dealing effectively with different kinds of people is what I do best.

During my learning time, I interacted with people of different opinions, interests, and weirdest characters. Occasionally, dealing with some individuals is quite challenging. I once viewed the football captain position in our institution. As most people know, school politics are no different from national politics. Thus critics and all sorts of humiliation are encountered during the campaigns. In most instances, I would encounter individuals who would openly tell how I will not grab the position or share it with my close allies. In this case, endurance and resilience are required. Accepting all the critics and embracing positivity enabled me to continue pursuing my dream of becoming the school captain.

People will always find something negative to criticize leaders or those who are in certain higher rank. This is a common phenomenon. Thus, leaders should find the best ways of dealing with such critiques. While at the position of school football captain, I received some complaints from students about my poor performance. I ensured that my entire obligations as the captain were completed on time and following the institution's requirements according to my knowledge and understanding. However, my resilience and hard work were not taken positively by all students, hence the emergence of unnecessary complaints. Despite the criticism, I still found ways of accommodating all students, for I knew that their complaints resulted from bitterness. Besides, holding certain positions require determination, friendliness and above all, sticking to my lanes never to digest any judgment from my subjects.

There are instances where problems arise while serving people. Some problems might require prompt solutions from the person in charge. In this case, there was a disagreement between my school football team and our opponents. The argument was about the institution to host the tournament that was to occur in two weeks. Given that we hosted the game in the last tournament, the institution was unwilling to interfere with other programs once more. So, it was either we postpone the game or cancel it. As the school captain, I was obliged to find amicable solution to the rising matter. Therefore, I urged both teams to postpone the game to unknown date.

Conclusively, understanding other peoples' perspectives and effectively dealing with them is the best talent a person can possess. Effective leaders should accept all the critics to be productive in their duties. Accepting all the critics and embracing positivity enabled me to continue perusing my dream of becoming the school captain. Most individuals will always find something negative to criticize leaders or those who are in certain higher rank. This is a common phenomenon; thus, leaders should find the best ways of dealing with such critiques. Therefore, I am the kind of person who will understand most individuals, accept both positive and negative criticism. Besides, human beings are lack perfection.
