Yes, I agree, Throughout these years technology has made important progress and has made more jobs. In contrast, technology has also brought away the jobs of some workers by having the work done rapidly and more effectively. That has made state, but it has also increased supply and decreased the price of industry. Although people turn into jobless, bills still have to be given. As technology progresses, some businesses disappear and new businesses get made. But these new businesses require complicated skills. Likewise, advancing technology causes lesser and much lesser jobs because most business becomes automated for instance. ???
