Freedom of Belief and Self-expression, and Its Importance in Society.

The discussion focuses on the freedom of belief and self-expression, and its importance in society. The key target for the entire discussion is the analysis that targets the case of the Ayaan Hirsi Ali, Theo Van Gogh filmmaker and the sixteen-year-old Mila, who has her life being threatened on her web due to her expressing her self freely. Mila has her pride in singing and dancing on Instagram and denied the sexual advancements by a Muslim fan who she ends up insulting plus the Muslims religion.

Freedom for a start is a fundamental human right that everyone must respect no matter their political, social and religious status. The moment the freedom of belief and self-expression is undermined; there are very many chances that many other rights have hindered too. The freedom of expression, when not limited society, becomes healthy development and democracy in the state, is also depicted in the most democratic countries. The freedom of belief and self-expression allows for a free exchange of information, ideas and opinion that allows the society to grow in the different sectors. Just imagine if the media or the social media accounts had no freedom of expression, how could have information reached the public more so on the bad actions by the government?

The other issue about freedom is that it should be expressed with limits knowing that as much as the rights are there, the right can only be a right if only it does not affect the life of another. The freedom of expression should be punishable under the law when it propagates blasphemy like the case of Malia she was quite wrong to abuse the Islamic man more so humiliate his religious life. There should be respect for everyone's religion as much as Malia was dancing and singing the abuse is punishable before the law. The constitution amendments should be created to limit the freedom of expression by prohibiting the blasphemy. The Islam guy was also not right to threaten Malia because Malia, under the constitution, has the right to life. Any persons caught on blasphemy should be arrested and punished for that.
