Community Resources

The process of who receives the community resources

- First, the individual should need community resources
- People receiving community resources do not have jobs able to sustain themselves
- Families that are struggling to make ends meet
- For one to get access to community resources they should come from a minority group
- Individuals who want to be mentored to enable them take advantage of new opportunities and financial qualification that leads to great levels of growth in business (Haul.org, 2020)
- Individuals who want to be trained on business management to advance their entrepreneurial skills but cannot access formal services
- Small and start-up businesses that may require boosting from the community resources
- This provides a source of employment which is beneficial to the community

How does an organization refer a client to the community resources?

- Through workshops that assist in the development of new skills and provide new information
- In case a client wants to be trained for a particular program that is provided by the community resources, a firm can refer the individual
- Different organizations that deal with homeless families may refer clients to a certain community resource if they feel that they can be helpful to the community (Haul.org, 2020)

- In case a student is willing to go back to school, child care organizations may refer the student to a specific community resource they see fits the child
- When a person has an idea deemed to be beneficial to the entire community
- The possibility of being referred to community service is dependent on the value a person has or level of impact they will have on the community
- In case the clients need any form of assistance from the community resources then they can be referred

Discuss your thoughts about the community resources

- Community resources are important since they provide different services to the community
- Some families may need to be assisted and a community resource would be the first response such a family could have
- Workforce development is designed to assist struggling families become stable through teaching them ways in which they can retain employment, search and apply for a job
- There are also ways in which community resources would help in improving health through wellness and health initiatives carried out in the community
- Educational services together with youth development programs done by community resources are commonly helpful in improving youth lives
- Being empowered economically will result in the whole community's economic growth
- This can be done through economic empowerment centers in a community
- Most of them work with public, non-profit and private resources building strong, successful and sustainable minority businesses
