

Possibly, some CCD students who are in work study do not come to the Confluence building and our study missed these individuals. Therefore, perhaps the true proportion of work study is larger. My suggestion for further study from other classroom building.

If I would to do anything different I would be interested in studying if ESL students participate in work study at CCD in a greater proportion than overall CCD population.