My Research Writing Experience

My experience with writing has been diverse as an undergraduate student. Research has been the most effective tool in the academic sector. My academic research strengths have enabled me to come up with the best findings in the academic sector. Having passion in every bit of the research I do has always motivated me to supplement my academic research. Additionally, interacting with other colleagues while conducting research has provided me with a toolbox for soft and hard skills that helped me throughout my profession and course work. Hence, commitment, dedication, and interaction with others have sharpened me to become a more proficient researcher.

Research is often involving hence, consume quality time. Thus, for one to conduct useful research, dedication and commitment are mandatory. Some of the writing challenges include; inadequate research materials, unavailable information and spending more time conducting research. Research materials within the institution's and local libraries are always limited. The few available ones are quickly grabbed by other research writers, thus posing a challenge to me since I have limited time. Furthermore, some of the information related to my study topic is not readily available, meaning I have to spend quality time in both the library and the internet. The instructor limits the time frame allocated to me; hence, I can not correctly complete the research.
