

y
by Z S

Submission date: 26-Nov-2020 05:16PM (UTC+0500)

Submission ID: 1457556647

File name: response_4.docx (13.9K)

Word count: 204

Character count: 1112

Response 4

The need for more healthcare providers is one of the factors forcing American health care to evolve from the past. The COVID 19 pandemic has led to this realization, as the increased number of patients proves that the nation has no enough workforce. I agree that the country has focused on having many medical doctors and vital professionals like advanced practice nurse practitioners and counselors are inadequate. In the next decade, the driving force will have broader coverage and increasing practitioners in the sector. In the short run, clients will benefit as the waiting time will be reduced. On the other hand, healthcare providers will have enough time with patients, thus offering quality and holistic care (Ariza-Vega et al., 2019). As the writer says, public health will increase as the right services will be accessed easily in the long run. As the post insists, the providers need to pay more attention to the patients' concerns and questions, so the right education is provided, resulting in better healthcare services and outcomes.

Reference

Ariza-Vega, P., Ortiz-Piña, M., Kristensen, M. T., Castellote-Caballero, Y., & Jiménez-Moleón, J. J. (2019). High perceived caregiver burden for relatives of patients following hip fracture surgery. Disability and Rehabilitation, 41(3), 311-318.

ORIGINALITY REPORT

0%

SIMILARITY INDEX

%

INTERNET SOURCES

0%

PUBLICATIONS

%

STUDENT PAPERS

PRIMARY SOURCES

Exclude quotes On

Exclude bibliography On

Exclude matches Off